Stampvol klasse 'n groot kopsorg

Devidean Moses

Ná die sesde dag van die nuwe skooljaar is 111 leerders van Drakenstein seods nie in 'n skool geplaat nie.

Drakenstein se skole bars jaar ná jaar uit hul nee woens sekerbare skole was se oorloepende see vol is en wat onderwysers onder geweldige druk plaas.

Of dit nou by 'n primêre skool of sekondêre skool is, is onderwysers steeds onder druk om sulke groot klasse – en dit boonop sonder 'n klasassistent – te onderrig.

Leerders word leerlik soos sardienetjies ingedruk.

Die skoolhoof van William Lloyd Primêr, Pieter Lourens, sien dat sy skool se leerders per klas moet neem, maar hulle maak voorreëling vir 'n bykomende drie leerders.

“Maar nou word ons skole gedwing om tot 50 leerders per klas in te neem. Ons skool is vir 400 leerders gebou en ons sit met 945 leerders. Dit is meer as dubbel die goel was dit moes wees,” kla Lourens.

“Maar steeds word skole met 'n goel van 50 leerders per klas sien 'n skool van 50 leerders per klas gemaak as dit by sistemiese soese kom.”

Lourens meen dat hul skool steeds nie die klasse om trek aangeken die gebou se intelligensie seker die trawing van die skool in

Op sy beurt wêre die skoolhoof van Charleson Hill Primêr, Vincom Parrot, die by sulle leerders was nie by skole plek gekry het nie, wêre by sy skool ingesoen het.

“Ek het die kinders ingesoen om 'n klein blyse verliging vir die nypende sekore aan skole te bied,” verduidelik hy.

“Oorvol klasse is nie bevorderlik nie en die benadeel die leerders wêre, maar die kinders sit om minse nie op seerse nie.”

Millicom Marson, 'n woordvoerder van die Wes-Kaapse departement van onderwys, sé die onderwysdepartement help om plekke wie by skole beskikbaar is, se idemiteer aangeken sulle leerders 'n plek by meer as een skool aanvaar.

Marson verduidelik: “Die is standaardpraktiek elke jaar en word goelom om 'n selling se kry waerme ons vir die begin van die jaar kan wêre.”

“Ons gebruik die sistere om skommellings in leerderskrywings en owerwage groot se idemiteer, byvoorbeeld waar skole meer onderwysers en ander hulpbronne benodig.”

Many children are still sitting at home 22 days after the school year started, because there is no space for them in local schools.

Nelson Mandela, accompanied by his then wife Winnie, triumphantly walks free after 27 years' incarceration.

The day the world's eyes were on Paarl

Lise Beyers

One can almost say that the lion of the struggle for justice and freedom Nelson Mandela got Paarl on the international map. Yes, this valley has long been known for some very fine wines and wine estates. But then a day arrived in 1995, and the entire world's eyes were glued on Paarl.

On Sunday 11 February it was precisely 26 years ago that Nelson Mandela took his first steps on freedom – and yes, here in the Paarl Valley.

This was a day that the world almost stood still in anticipation of the long awaited release of a great man.

Looking back on this event, it seems just the other day, and I remember every moment that led up to it.

I was working for a daily newspaper in Johannesburg, and already in January two days were missing in our archives that Mandela's release was imminent.

Soon President FW de Klerk made his groundbreaking speech on 2 February 1995, unsealing various political organisations as well as state unions.

He also announced that Nelson Mandela would be released unconditionally, but no date was given.

And so we waited in anticipation for the day to arrive.

About a week after FW's speech, I was suddenly informed that Mandela would be released the next day, and that there was a seat for me on a flight to Cape Town which was leaving in one hour.

I packed an overnight bag in five minutes, grabbed my camera bag and got I went.

The plane had been informed that Mandela would walk out of the then named Victor Verster Prison at noon, a Sunday morning.

I was up bright and early, and headed for Paarl, my home town.

From the N1 I made my way to the prison on the Wemmershoek Road. Even today, when I drive this road, I still picture that day in my mind.

The road was closed quite a few kilometres before Victor Verster, and it was a brisk 30-minute walk to the gates. To top it all, it was a typical, scorching hot February day.

On arrival, I recognised a few other photographers whom I knew from Johannesburg. We all scuffed to get our spot ready for the great moment.

Ten o'clock came and went, so did the next hour, and the next.

The haze was breaking down and, as one seag, I did feel slightly tense.

But there we stood, without wear or shade, and too afraid to move a step, just in case the big moment should arrive.

At around noon the gates finally opened and the sun and games began.

Mandela emerged hand-in-hand with his then wife Winnie, both triumphantly waving their fists in the air. The crowd cheered and we photographers surged forward to get better shots, but were pushed back by security guards.

And within what felt like seconds, Mandela climbed into a car and was whisked away.

I sprinted back to my vehicle, which was parked kilometres away at what is now the turn-off to Val de Vie (because of security we were not allowed to drive to the prison) and rushed to Cape Town Airport to put my films on an aeroplane to Johannesburg. Next stop was the Grand Parade in Cape Town, to observe Mandela's first words of freedom.

The next day it was his first press conference at the home of Archbishop Desmond Tutu at Bishopscourt.

That evening I flew back to Johannesburg, and the following weeks I spent mostly in Soweto outside Mandela's old home in Vilakazi Street. He chose to move back to this humble home, instead of the mansion Winnie had built.

Now 26 years have gone by, and this year is particularly relevant as it also celebrates wine world have been Madiba's 100th birthday.

The day he was released has been etched into the history of the world. It may not have changed the world, but it did give the world hope. And I am proud to say that I was there to share in this historic moment.

Charity wine auction raises R17,5 million for education

A total amount of R17,5 million was raised for education in the Cape winelands at the 2018 Cape Wine Auction, held at Rustenberg Wine Estate in Stellenbosch.

This charity auction has amassed nearly R20 million in the five years of its existence.

The day's highest bid of R700 000 went for the Gustave French Riviera Lot which included five nights in a private villa in Cannes on the French Riviera for eight people and lunch or dinner in the private dining room of South African chef Jan Hendrik van der Westhuizen's JAN, the award-winning Michelin star restaurant in Nîmes.

Four signed magnum bottles of the sold out Jurei Quantum Grand Reserve Bordeaux style 2011 blend were included in the package.

Other highly contested lots included a getaway to Anara Benguerra Island in Mozambique and five cases of Chateau Pas de Loup wines from France's Loire Valley, a comprised three-night stay at Morakuru Beach Lodge (opening July 2018) inclusive of a Warwick Estate wine experience, and the American Express trip to the RPI London Film Festival, concert tickets for Shania Twain at the O2 and the quarter finals of the 2018 US Open Tennis Championships in New York.

The Cape Wine Auction, sponsored by Nedbank Private Wealth, is regarded as one of the most significant international wine charity auctions ever conducted in South Africa, uniting the industry around a single goal of raising money for education.

The auction has created a benchmark in philanthropy, raising almost R75 million, with all proceeds going to 27 carefully selected beneficiaries, all of which have had a profound impact on education and the lives of children in the Cape winelands.

"The commitment to giving back, changing lives and sharing good fortune was certainly witnessed in the overwhelming bids raised this year," says Darlene Robertson, director of the Cape Wine Auction.

"With this money we can expand our programmes and reach even greater heights from the progress we have achieved so far."

The 2018 auction kicked off with the American Express Barrel Auction on Friday at the Tokara Doluobosom on the Tokara Wine and Olive Estate, followed by the main event on Saturday, at the Rustenberg Estate in Stellenbosch.

The idea for the auction was conceived four years ago, when Mike Ratcliffe (MD of Warwick and Vindredi Wine Estates) was inspired by a trip to Auction Napa Valley in the US, a wine auction with the mandate of subsidising health care.

Back in South Africa he was soon joined by a powerhouse group of trustees, which now includes Paul Clover, Wendy Appelbaum, Raymond Ndlovu, Ken Kinsey-Quick and Stephen Thompson, and the dream of making a real difference soon became a reality.

The CWA trustees instituted a new model of distribution for the auction proceeds, with greater collaboration among the 27 organisations that receive assistance, to optimise productivity by eliminating duplication and concentrating on key areas of expertise.

"The enormous generosity of those who have attended the auctions has ensured that 50 000 children have benefited in the past five years," Appelbaum pointed out.

"We are also proud of the fact that every cent donated goes to the children."

Ratcliffe added: "The Cape Wine Auction is gaining momentum, but it is still a baby and I have committed 10 years to getting it to where it needs to be."

"I don't believe that we have scratched the surface and I would like to see us raising upwards of R100 million in the foreseeable future."

"The Cape Wine Trust has developed such an innovative and transparent methodology with dramatic corporate governance which is now being recognised by charitable trusts, high-net worth individuals and corporate donors.

We hope to grow our trust to become a conduit for 'cash' donations in the education space."

ARC trials irrigate cash crops with treated winery wastewater

The Agricultural Research Council (ARC) in Stellenbosch has been involved in research on winery wastewater treatment and the irrigation of cash crops with treated wastewater for the last 20 years. The study, conducted at Jurei winery, was promoted due to high levels of unemployment and food shortages in Jurei.

In subsequent years, further studies focused on the irrigation of vineyards owing to water shortages.

Parts of South Africa are currently experiencing water shortages due to drought, which has a negative effect on agriculture as less water is available for irrigation.

In this regard, results from Dr Erickson Mubida's research has found that treated winery wastewater with chemical oxygen demand (COD) of less than 1 000 mg/l can be used for cash crop production, as it had no detrimental effect on the crop as well as the environment.

Cash crop production using treated winery wastewater will also go a long way in addressing poverty alleviation experienced by farm workers. It must, however, be emphasised that winery wastewater that is combined with sewerage wastewater is not suitable for cash crop production.
